Input, Output, Reward

Questions for Reflection and Evaluation

In this video there are a couple of lessons. First, to have more of what life has to offer, whether it is in your business and personal life, you need to have a higher expectation of yourself.

Secondly, when you give more than expected then you increase the likelihood of receiving more than you expect.

Take a look at your past accomplishments.

1. Where did you do more than what was expected?

2. How did doing more than expected make you feel? Or, what type of acknowledgment or response did you receive from others?

3. What were the rewards for you? Was it better relationships? Was it a promotion? Was it more money?

4. List three areas where you can commit to making greater input to move your business and life forward.

c.

5. What reward are you hoping to gain in each of these areas?
